

Tina's Compendium

Cars
1980-2023

by Bettina von Schweinitz

Introduction

In July 1980 I bought my first car, a Chevy Malibu. In 2023 I sold my last car. I had a total of 9 cars in 43 years.

This compendium is mostly about the cost of each car. The last 8 cars (not the first Malibu) cost me an average of $433 per month.

This compendium also documents any other information I might still be able to find in 2023, including some photos.

Chevy Malibu 1978

Chevy S10 Pickup

Pontiac Firebird

Pontiac Grand Am

Hyundai Accent 2000

Hyundai Accent 2012

Honda Pilot 2013

Honda CRV 2019

Chevy S10 pickup was $441 per month

Used the pickup quite a bit while landscaping and finishing the basement.

My horses were also at a Barn in Poolesville which was quite a drive.

Almost every weekend I was Volksmarching, and the event can be some distance away.

Pontiac Firebird cost $378 per month.

Bought this car after I was done with landscaping.

My two adopted dogs, Poka and Biscuit, choose this type of car.

Every time I would take them to a volksmarch, they would lead me to a dark colored 4 door sedan and wait for me to open the back door.

This car was a dark blue 4 door sedan. They were content in the back seat.

In the last year of this car it began to develop an oil leak, so I traded it in.

The Pontiac Grand Am cost me $341 per month

I thought this was a good trade up. But after awhile I noticed that it would wear out tires quickly. It had a back-end alignment issue that could not be corrected. I continued to drive the car anyway. Just had to hold onto the steering wheel to keep it going straight, and buy lots of back tires.

In 1998, the 2 spark plugs (it had a 4-cylinder engine) were in too tight and I did not want the expense of re-boring the engine. I drove the car until it blew a gasket. Then I donated it to the Red Cross.

The Hyundai Accent 2000 cost me $244 per month.

I had been without a car since April 1999 and bought this in November 2001.

The dealer was having a special that you could buy this car for $9,999 cash.

Several of us from Fairchild/Smiths bought this model car. The others bought it as a cheap commute car. That way, they did not put so many miles on their more expensive family size car.

This Accent ran well until its 10th year. Then everything wore out at the same time – brakes, shocks, engine, and more. I traded it in for the new years model in 2011.

It was running fine. In 2014 I had moved to Texas and was taking care of Mutti and Papa. There were too many cars at the house, and I was the only driver still practicing. So, by 2017 we sold all the cars but the Honda Pilot, including mine.

Mutti actually owned the Pilot. After 2014 I took over many of the daily expenses, so part of the Pilot's cost belonged to me. By 2019, Mutti was having difficulty lifting herself into the Pilot. The seat was much higher than her wheelchair. We had planned a nice birthday for her at her favorite Chinese restaurant. So, I went to the dealer and asked if they had a car that was more wheelchair friendly. They recommended the CRV which was nicknamed the "Child of the Pilot" because it was just like a Pilot but everything was lower.

The CRV cost $532 per month

The front seat was the same height as a wheel chair. The back section was just right for a folded wheelchair. It worked great, Mutti could easily get in and out of the CRV. And I could easily lift the wheelchair into the back compartment. We had a wonderful birthday party for Mutti

In 2021, Chris had a heart attack. He stayed several months at my house for rehabilitation. We again used the CRV with a wheelchair.

In late 2021, Chris and I were going on a cruise out of Galveston. Two days before the cruise the CRV refused to start. Would not even make a noise. The tow-truck driver got the CRV started and I drove it to the dealer. They replaced the battery, but could not find anything wrong. Drove it home. Then that afternoon it did it again. Researched the symptoms on the internet. Found several references to a starter issue that was hard to diagnose, just had to replace the whole starter system. It started for the drive to the cruise line. We drove all the way down without stopping the engine for anything, including getting lunch and gas. After we drove home, I went back to the dealer and traded-in the CRV. In the 30 months that I had owned the CRV, I had driven 19,911 miles.

The Toyota RAV4 cost me $601 a month.

When I went to trade in the CRV in September 2021, I went back to the same salesman that sold me the CRV. But now he was working for the same dealer but at the Toyota sales room. Because of the COVID19 pandemic, new cars were in short supply, and there were not many used cars either. Except for internet and electronics for working at home, the rest of the economy was grinding to a halt. There were only two sedans for sale at Toyota. I grab the RAV4. It met all my needs. It is the same as the CRV except that the starter system was working.

By August 2023, the COVID pandemic restrictions were being lifted and I had moved into the Conservatory of North Austin. I no longer had a need to a car. The Conservatory provided a bus for transportation to stores. And I could use Uber for my own personal trips. You can take a lot of Uber trips for $600 a month.

In the two years that I owned the RAV4 I had only gone 8597 miles. That included driving twice to Galveston (cruises), several time to San Antonio (Graves, Dude Ranch), and lots of doctor appointments for Mutti and Chris. That was all over, and I had nowhere to go.
